Sachbuch Geschichte, englisch

In August 1989, a group of Hungarian activists did the unthinkable: they entered the forbidden militarised zone of the Iron Curtain - and held a picnic. On wisps of rumour, thousands of East German 'holiday-makers' had made their way to the border between Hungary and Austria and packed the nearby camping sites. The highest state authorities were choosing to turn a blind eye - but that could change at any moment.

Winner of the Orwell Prize for Political Writing 2024.

Lisette lives in East Berlin but brings her newborn baby to a hospital in West Berlin. Under doctor's orders, she goes home to rest, leaving the baby in the care of the hospital. But overnight the border between East and West closes, slicing the city - and the world - in two. With a city in chaos and armed guards ordered to shoot anyone who tries to cross, her situation is desperate.

A historical novel set in Berlin in 1961 and during the Second World War.
